Reflection

The Importance of Helping Others

In the gospel reading today, Jesus is going about his ministry when “people brought to him a deaf man who had a speech impediment and begged him to lay his hand on him.” The beauty of this episode is that the people did not allow this man to suffer alone. This man did not go to Jesus by himself but the community aided him. The people pleaded with Jesus on his behalf obviously so because he could not speak for himself as he had a speech impediment. There is a collective effort to bring him some help and this person received healing through the kindness of others.

For us too, we have a duty as Christian people to bring others to God’s presence and to intercede for others on their behalf. Doing things for others, whether it be small or big, unplanned or regular volunteering is a powerful way of living our Christian values. The people we help maybe family or friends, strangers or colleagues, they can be the young or the elderly, they can be in our local communities or distance away. Whatever help you give to another can be a life changing moment.

We learn from the gospel today that helping others to succeed in life should be a top priority for us. We are individual persons but we do not journey alone in the world. Commit to be an instrument of blessing wherever you find yourself. Every act of kindness is contagious. It makes our world a beautiful place and it builds the kingdom of God on earth.
